MALADIA BOURNEVILLE – PREZENTARE DE CAZ

şef lucr. dr. Gabriela Sechel[1], şef lucr. dr. Andreea Fleancu[1],
prof. univ.dr. Liliana Rogozea[1],
dr. Zsolt Szekely[2]
[1]Universitatea „Transilvania” din Braşov, Facultatea de Medicină
[2]Policlinica de Diagnostic Rapid – Medis Braşov

Tuberous sclerosis is an inherited system disease with prominent coetaneous, visceral and cerebral manifestations. The majority of the lesions are hamartomas, slowly growing masses composed of disorganized arrangement of cells that are relatively normal and that are appropriate for the tissue or site of origin. The unique diagnostic findings include the presence of multiple subependymal nodules and multiple cortical tubers.