

LISTER, INITIATOR OF ANTISEPSIS

Prof. Liliana Rogozea MD, PhD
Faculty of Medicine, University Transilvania Braşov

Joseph Lister was born at Upton, Essex, England, in 1827, and died in 1912. He was surgery professor at Glasgow, at Edinburgh, and at King's College Hospital, London.

Even before Pasteur, Lister had been convinced of the importance of cleanliness the operating room; de surgical coat or the instruments and he proceeded to develop his antiseptic surgical methods, who have a very rapidly success led to its general adoption

In according with the results of such beneficence we can think that Lister make one of the great discoveries of the age.
